

General information

The workshop will be held at the Institute for Maternal and Child Health IRCCS Burlo Garofolo, Via dell'Istria 65/1, 34137, Trieste, Italy

View of the entrance from the bus stop

Bus n.10 runs every 7-10 mins. from the town centre to Via dell'Istria (15 mins). Bus stops only 20 mts. from the entrance of the Institute.

The objective of the workshop is to gather and discuss experiences with the implementation of KMC programmes at different levels of health care and to provide ideas for future improvements (planning, training, coverage, quality of care, monitoring and evaluation, priorities for investment).

The maximum number of participants is 60 of which half will be directly selected and invited by the organisers. The remaining participants should be health professionals who are already engaged in KMC research and development programmes and projects, or have positive plans to do so.

To register and pay, please go to <http://inkmc.net/index.php/registration>.

Background

Kangaroo Mother Care (KMC) was developed in the mid-70s in Colombia to make up for the inadequacy of incubators in the management of preterm infants. KMC has since spread, slowly at first and then more rapidly when research results proved its safety and efficacy in both low and high-income countries.

The WHO Collaborating Centre for Maternal and Child Health based at IRCCS Burlo Garofolo in Trieste, Italy (WHO/CC), organized in 1996 the First Workshop and Congress on KMC, at the end of which the International Network on KMC (INK) was created. It was a small but important event because it was decided to organize similar conferences every two years, and the bases were put to develop a practical guide that was published by WHO 2003.

Meanwhile, research made tremendous progress and KMC is currently listed among effective interventions to reduce neonatal mortality globally by WHO, by governmental and non-governmental international and national organizations, and by prestigious medical journals such as the Lancet.

Since 1996 INK, has organised workshops and congresses every two years in various countries. At the 10th congress, held in Kigali, Rwanda, in November 2014, it was proposed that the 20th anniversary workshop and congress be held in Trieste.

The event is not commercially sponsored, to avoid any conflict of interests. Speakers and participants will have to meet the cost of their participation, or search for institutions, foundations and organizations that will accept to fund their attendance.
